Thank you for preparing to promote the One Great Hour of Sharing offering

Greetings in the Name of Jesus,

Thank you for preparing to promote the One Great Hour of Sharing offering.

It is our pleasure to share the enclosed resources with you. You can use them to promote the One Great Hour of Sharing offering. An electronic version is available to make it easier for you to use these resources and adapt them as you see fit. All images and wording are yours to adapt or use. We pray the role we play in the wider world through the offering, as the United Church of Christ, will inspire your generosity.

In 2020, the suggested offering date is March 22. The theme is Invest in Futures. The scripture reference is 1 Corinthians 3:5–9. It tells us we are servants in the service of God, one planting, one watering, and God being the one who grows and nurtures it all.

When we participate in the One Great Hour of Sharing offering, we provide valuable support. Our church reaches people who suffer from emergencies, chronic poverty, and violence worldwide.

Among the support we give, water, sanitation and adequate nutrition top the list of resources needed. Assets such as irrigation systems, wells, latrines and wash houses change peoples' lives in amazing ways. Clean water and adequate facilities improve health and gives dignity to people at the same time.

Clean water is also provided to grow better gardens. A combination of water, seeds, tools, and training on modern farming techniques produce a great harvest—leaving more money for families to live on. Lives are changed when health improves. Lives are changed when communities thrive.

Storms, such as the earthquake and tsunami that devastated the small island of Sulawesi, Indonesia (September 2018) destroy everything in their paths! In Sulawesi, gardens, houses, water systems, latrines and livelihoods. . . all were gone. Many people could not imagine how they could go on. But with support of OGHS, 13,000 people now receive clean water.

What may seem like a small investment to us, yields amazing results worldwide. With water, sanitation and adequate food, children are more likely to attend school, and women, no longer searching for water, are able to earn money to contribute to their families' well-being and overall health.

Stand with UCC congregations by lending a hand through support to the OGHS offering! Your financial assistance will directly help people and communities affected by disaster, violence and poverty. Your financial assistance will be an investment into the lives of people and communities who need it most.

Together, we are co-workers in God's service, planting and watering seeds for God to nurture.

Thank you on behalf of the individuals and communities who will benefit directly from your support.

To make the One Great Hour of Sharing offering part of your congregation's outreach this year, here are four simple steps that may be helpful to follow:

- 1 Set a date for the offering and announce it to the church along with a goal.
- 2 Make a big deal about the offering—hanging the poster in a prominent place.
- 3 During worship, share stories and videos you can download for free. Help your members learn more about what the offering does, and get excited.
- 4 Thank everyone for participating in the offering, and announce how much was received. If you set a goal, let people know if you reached it, or have a little ways to go.

In addition to Our Church's Wider Mission (Basic Support), the United Church of Christ has 4 Special Mission Offerings (SMOs). These offerings exist to allow congregations and individuals to meet people at points of critical need in their lives. Though many options exist for direct, individual support of these needs, the SMOs allow a common witness and make a collective positive impact. Our church has identified four areas where these critical human needs exist:

- One Great Hour of Sharing—in places lacking health and educational resources and/or where disaster has struck;
- Neighbors in Need—within systems of injustice which oppress daily life and opportunity;
- Strengthen the Church—in the nurture of youth and congregations just beginning their lives of faith;
- The Christmas Fund—in the lives of church leaders without sufficient resources to live with dignity;

We believe these SMOs collectively serve to lift people closer to the abundance and wholeness to which Jesus Christ has called us to work together to bring about. Join the other 1,000 churches that have made the decision to become 5 for 5 congregations, supporting OCWM and all four of the Special Mission Offerings.

Invest in Futures

Scripture: 1 Corinthians 3:5–9 NRSV

What then is Apollos? What is Paul? Servants through whom you came to believe, as the Lord assigned to each. I planted, Apollos watered, but God gave the growth. So neither the one who plants nor the one who waters is anything, but only God who gives the growth. The one who plants and the one who waters have a common purpose, and each will receive wages according to the labor of each. For we are God’s servants, working together; you are God’s field, God’s building.

Theme Interpretation

Date trees can take a decade to bear fruit and 100 years to reach their full height. The hands that plant such a tree may do so knowing they may never rest in that tree’s shade. Moved by love, they invest in that unseen future.

Brazilian theologian Rubem Alves wrote, “Let us plant dates even though those who plant them will never eat them.”

“We are all co-workers together in God’s service,” writes Paul in 1 Corinthians 3. Some of us plant. Some of us water. But God gives the growth. Through One Great Hour of Sharing, we become like date tree planters: serving the fruitful future for which God yearns. Who knows what growth God may bring when we join hands together across distance, across traditions, and across time for the love of what we may never see?

As an example, young women arriving at the New Life Center in Thailand have escaped difficult pasts, and often face uncertain futures. Whether they’re survivors of abuse, trafficking, or just a lack of access to education, they may find it hard to envision a life beyond their present situation. But at New Life Center, they are met with kindness and compassion. They encounter people willing to invest the time and resources to help them imagine abundant futures full of opportunities for education, friendship, and healing.

Hands that once shook with fear now move swiftly across a keyboard, operate a sewing machine, or warmly clasp the hands of a friend. The support they receive at the New Life Center empowers these young women to share their own gifts for the future thriving of the world.

When we give to One Great Hour of Sharing, we help make all of this new life and growth possible. Through our sharing, we are connected as co-workers. Our combined gifts empower young girls through education, help women learn trades; rebuild communities after disaster, and support communities through agriculture as they learn to sustain themselves. In these and so many other ways, we release the waters of God’s growth when we invest in the lives of others.

In sharing our gifts, we join together as both donors and recipients of generous investment in the growth God will bring. As Paul writes, “the one who plants and the one who waters have one purpose.” Moved by our common purpose, we share our gifts for the glory of God and for our neighbors’ good.

When we make a gift to One Great Hour of Sharing, we invest in futures. While we cannot know the future, we do know that our future depends upon the future thriving of others.

Investing in the future God will bring is rewarding. For when we invest in each other and in each other’s futures, we delight in knowing that we take part of God’s holy work of growing and thriving. We celebrate the profound joy of living “for the love of what we may never see.” When we make a gift to One Great Hour of Sharing, we invest in futures.

2020 Worship Materials

Scripture: 1 Corinthians 3:5–9 NRSV

Call to Worship

One: Gardeners plant, not fully knowing if their gardens will grow. Yet, they kneel in the dirt, dig with their hands, and bury one seed at a time.

Many: They plant and trust that a harvest will come.

One: God's word tells us that we are to be co-workers in service to others. Yet many times, we don't see how our meager support can help.

Many: We plant and trust that a harvest will come.

One: One plants. Another waters. But God gives the growth. We join together as co-workers in God's service to release the healing waters of God's love throughout our world.

Many: We rejoice, trusting in God's goodness, and trusting in God's word.

Invocation

God of Growth and Abundance,
Prepare the soil of our hearts to receive your life-bearing call that we would invest our gifts with confidence and joy in the fruitful future you bring forth. We pray in the name of the One who makes all things new. Amen.

Offertory

When violence reigns, disaster strikes, or resources are scarce, a future with hope can seem far away. In those times, our communities can act as sources of important support, embodying the love of the Holy Source of all hope and healing.

Paul writes we are all co-workers in God's service. We each have gifts to offer that may serve as channels of love and strength to all of us who find ourselves in need of support. We can trust that whatever we offer, God will use to bring a future with hope.

Through the ministries of this church and through the ministries supported by One Great Hour of Sharing, we have the opportunity to be part of the hopeful future God is already bringing forth. Imagine what the future could be like when we join hands together across distance, cultures, and generations to invest in the growth God promises to bring.

Let us invest our gifts in the future that we can build as co-workers in the kingdom of God. Let us give generously today, believing in the future growth God brings when we work, plant, and build together.

Prayer of Dedication

Fruit-bringing God,
Bless the investments we commit to your work this day that our efforts would serve the future thriving of the world you so love. Amen.

Litany

Holy God, who brings sweet growth, teach us to live for the love of what we do not yet see.

Though we may sometimes feel buried deep, we can trust that your love, your hope, and your healing are always making ready to burst forth. Cultivate in us a belief in what the future could be when each one of us is empowered to fully live into the life your envision for us.

O God, who brings sweet growth, teach us to live for the love of what we do not yet see.

Your life-bringing design is visible in the beauty of creation, in the dawning of each day and in the turning of the seasons. Awaken in us a hope that when we plant, when we water, and when we invest in the future you are bringing, we are part of the joyful work of releasing the waters of new life.

O God, who brings sweet growth, teach us to live for the love of what we do not yet see. Amen.

Communion Invitation

One: Dear co-workers in God's service, we are called to the feast prepared by Christ.

Many: We come tired yet hopeful.
We come with laughter and tears.
We come broken and blessed.
We come to taste God's promise of a world made whole.

One: At this table, may we find rest. At this table, may we find hope. At this table, may we be moved to plant new seeds, to nourish fresh sprouts, and to join in bringing forth all the future fruit God is growing even now.

Many: To this table, we bring our dreams, our prayers, and our gifts with hopeful trust in God's holy healing power and love.

Words of Institution

On the night that he knew would be his last with them,
Jesus gathered his disciples for a feast.
They had walked many miles together.
They had known trials. They had seen wonders.
They would soon need to trust that God is in the business of bringing hopeful futures from even the most painful endings.
So after dinner was over, Jesus took the bread, blessed it, broke it, and shared it with them, saying take, eat, do this in remembrance of me.
Then he also took the cup, blessed it, saying, "take, drink, do this in remembrance of me."
Every time we do this, beloved co-workers in Christ, we too remember that God is in the business of bringing hopeful futures even when we have no idea of what is to come.
We eat and drink today to be filled to the brim with that good news.
We eat and drink this day to become holy channels of Christ's hope and healing for ourselves and for our world.

Prayer for Bread and Cup

God of the table,
You feed the wild birds of the air with fruit-filled
Branches and we flock to your table today
Longing to taste the hope and healing that you promise.
Nourish us with the bread
That sustains our souls and gives us hope.
Wash over us, reviving our roots in you.
Bless these elements we share
That the future you long for might
Burst into bloom in our hearts and in the world.

Thanksgiving Prayer

Rain-bringing God,
We give thanks for the gifts of bread and cup
Flowing with your promise of a future full of hope.
Carry us forth with courage to live for the love of all that we do not yet see.
With trust in your eternal stream of new life we pray.
Amen.

Benediction

Go forth bearing the good news that God promises a future full of hope.
Go forth with expectant eyes, watching for the fruit God will bring.
Go in boldness, proclaiming God's promises to the world.

Offering Reminder—Prayer Station

Preparation

Find a place in your church that would be an appropriate place for people to pray.
Consider setting up a table where people can write down prayers or place stories and images that describe the people and communities prayed for during worship.

Materials Needed

Table Pens Paper Basket/Box Candle

Stories can be found at ucc.org/oghs_stories

Facebook posts are added daily, find up-to-date stories at facebook.com/onegreathourofsharingucc

Setting

During your prayer time, lift up the person, family or community you selected from our website. Share their need during an appropriate time (Prayers of the People, Joys and Concerns, etc.) Include them in the prayer time when you normally pray for other members of your congregation. Select a different story for each week the One Great Hour of Sharing offering is being promoted.

Purpose

Through praying for others within our worship space, they become more real to us and become a part of our community. We begin to care for them and become more aware of the situations that are being addressed through the One Great Hour of Sharing Special Mission offering.

Action Request

If you normally keep a log of the people you pray for, please add these special prayer requests to the log, or display them throughout the week at the Prayer Station. Ask members and friends to consider how God used our One Great Hour of Sharing offering to help restore and strengthen communities in ways beyond our imagination.

Offer prayers for the people, their communities, and for the work we do with them through One Great Hour of Sharing.

Sermon Starter

In the church, we often talk about the virtues of “servant leadership.” At its best, that term encourages church leaders to model their ministry after Jesus, who stooped to wash the feet of his disciples, who served them at the table, and who prayed for them faithfully even in his final hours.

God invites each of us to lead by serving, to share freely of our gifts so that God may work through us. Indeed, the word translated as “servant” in 1 Cor. 3:5 in the NIV is diakonos, the root of the term “deacon.” Paul uses the term to describe someone whose work may be of benefit to others. Specifically in this context, he describes someone whose efforts God may use as a channel for good and growth. In choosing to humbly give their gifts, “servant-leaders” become channels of God’s healing love, so that all may enjoy the powerful experience of shared value, worth, and investment.

When we work and share our gifts together, none of us has to be Paul or Apollos, or any famous spiritual leader, in order to be faithful to the responsibilities we have been given. None of us is expected to solve all the problems of the world alone, or even as individual churches. Rather, we are called to use the time, talent, and resources we have been given for the opportunities before us. In so doing, we have the joyful opportunity to participate in the growth God is already providing in the world.

“... we have the joyful opportunity to participate in the growth God is already providing in the world.”

One Great Hour of Sharing works through a global network of partners, so that none of us has to do this work alone. Strong relationships are at the heart of this shared ministry, recognizing that true servant leadership empowers each person and community to use the gifts they’ve been given.

The Greek word translated as “co-workers” in 1 Cor. 3:9 in the NIV is synergoi. It shares a root with the English word synergy, meaning the interaction of two contributions—which, when combined, produce a greater effect than the simple sum of those contributions. When we give to One Great Hour of Sharing, our gifts join with others and the effects multiply exponentially as God gives growth.

The growth of any garden depends on the soil in which it grows. Different plants give and take different nutrients from the soil. Good gardeners are careful to balance plant varieties so that everything growing in the garden will have what it needs to thrive and bear fruit. If the balance of the soil nutrients is thrown off, all the plants in the garden may suffer. Keeping that balance does not mean treating all plants the same. Rather, it means giving each plant what it needs. As co-workers in God's garden, when we share in the work of One Great Hour of Sharing, we make an investment in the future and receive abundant blessings in return.

Unlike with the stock market or a retirement account, we do not invest in God's growth to receive a benefit for ourselves. Rather, we give, receive, plant, and water in the service of the future for which God yearns.

A little-known band called Yurtfolk² set to music the words of the Brazilian theologian Rubem Alves' quote: "We must live for the love of what we may never see." The song tells the story of an old man who plants a date tree in whose shade he will never sit, and whose fruit he will never eat. Why would he do that? Simply—for the love of what he may never see.

In this letter from Paul, the Jesus-followers in Corinth are encouraged to give and plant without undue attachment or ownership to the end result. It matters little who takes credit for the good fruits borne by the faith community in Corinth—Paul or Apollos. What matters is that they bear the fruit God has called them to bear.

Church leaders may want to reflect on how our churches learn to live for the love of what we may never see. How might we invest in futures, trusting that even if we may never see it, God indeed will give abundant growth?

'It's better to help them'

"Maybe I'll go back to my country and die there."
That's how Ajuwa felt after spending seven years in a refugee camp in Malawi.

Ajuwa and his wife, Imani, had fled their homes in Bukavu, Democratic Republic of the Congo to a refugee camp. After the Rwandan Genocide, conflict among rebel groups and various governments arose in eastern Congo. War broke out, and Ajuwa and Imani were no longer safe.

"Almost every day, people were killed. Usually, they would come at night. They come with guns to take things, kill people, and take people away."

After seven years in a refugee camp, Ajuwa, Imani and their four children who were born in the camp were accepted into the resettlement program which allowed them to move to the U.S. Now, the family is adapting to their new life in Greensboro. The children are doing well in school, Ajuwa has a good job and obtained his driver's license, and they've been able to buy a car to get the kids to school and for Ajuwa to get to work.

"Almost every day, people were killed. Usually, they would come at night. They come with guns to take things, kill people, and take people away."

It took hard work, motivation, persistence, and—most importantly—learning English (Ajuwa already speaks 5 languages, and now also wants to learn Spanish) for them to get to this point.

Ajuwa and Imani ask that all of us remember that there are refugees still suffering in camps, urging us to "be attentive to refugees...When you meet a refugee, it is better to help them."

Ajuwa and family along with other refugees are supported through OGHS' partnership with Church World Service. Together we are making a difference in the lives of refugees.

Not Just Peanuts

In a community that's far from any town, where only 22 families live, 3 sisters planned to change their community with peanuts.

Sarthia, Piremeka, and Vishaathana explained that it had only rained in their community in India a few times over the last year. A lack of water had affected everyone.

The thought to improve their community began when Piremeka and her husband began dreaming of a better life for their two children. They heard about programs that provided small loans to people like them. The first loan they received, helped them open a little store. The store—the only of its kind for miles—carried groceries and items that you would find in any corner store. They had bread, milk, oil, and even candy and sweets.

However, the store didn't provide Piremeka and her family the kind of life that would give their children better opportunities, and there certainly wasn't enough of a profit to invest in their community. So Piremeka and her sisters came up with a different plan. They got loans to grow peanuts.

As peanut farmers, they were very wise. They held on to their peanuts for just the right time to take them to market. They would then sell and receive the best price for their harvest. They learned that if they would plant peanuts for 2 or 3 harvests and then allow the land to rest, that they would reap a bigger harvest while also protecting their farmland investment and peanut business.

The sisters and their families used peanut farming to raise enough money to ultimately build wells on their property. Where they lived, their gardens, animals and livelihoods were all affected by a water shortage.

By building three wells in their small community, they would change the flow of the water, bringing water into the community where all could benefit.

To you and me, these may look like ordinary peanuts. But to the people in Piremeka's village, the peanuts were an investment in their futures.

“By building three wells in their small community, they would change the flow of the water, bringing water into the community where all could benefit.”

Investing in Florida

Recovery is challenging enough for people with means, but hundreds—including people with fixed incomes, the ill, elderly, and disabled—simply lack the resources to rebuild on their own.

With generous contributions to One Great Hour of Sharing (OGHS), the United Church of Christ with the help of volunteer work teams from around the country, who have given thousands of hours, have restored close to 200 homes.

A 70-year-old disabled Navy veteran said, “Having a roof that was leaky and falling in was very difficult for me. I did not know what I would do.”

His Volusia County, Florida, home lost most of the roof’s shingles to Hurricane Irma’s winds (2017). The storm opened the way to major leaks, which destroyed much of the ceiling in the main living area and bedroom.

UCC Disaster Ministries partnered with Volusia Interfaiths/Agencies Networking in Disaster (VIND) to help the most vulnerable disaster survivors. VIND helped the veteran obtain a loan to pay for a new roof, and deployed a volunteer work team from Altoona (Pennsylvania) United Church of Christ to complete the interior repairs in his home.

“The volunteers ... did it with such love and compassion, taking the job under their wings and making it perfect,” the veteran said. “My health was deteriorating due to breathing in particles and debris from the water damage in my home, but it is improving now. I have a new outlook and I am no longer depressed.” Thanking VIND and the volunteers, he said, “You have changed my life.”

Needs are being met in Florida with support from OGHS. Volunteer work teams, a construction supervisor, and over two dozen UCC congregations have volunteered to help repair homes.

Not too far away from Volusia County, the Florida Panhandle is still trying to recover from a very powerful hurricane, Hurricane Michael (2016). UCC Disaster Ministries is working with Long Term Recovery Groups (LTRG) in seven counties. In fall 2019, Betzi Yungclas, an experienced UCC Partners in Service volunteer, and Benji Benzschawel, a full-time construction manager, were deployed to the area. They will assist the LTRGs with building coordination and volunteer management for a year.

“While progress has been made in Florida over the last year in recovery, there are still significant unmet needs,” said Ken Skalitzky, UCC Disaster Recovery Specialist for the Eastern Region. “Please support disaster recovery with your work teams, donations and prayers,” Skalitzky said. “Our ability to support long-term recovery in Florida is but one example of our living the gospel of Christ.” It is also a chance to invest in the futures of communities.

“Our ability to support long-term recovery in Florida is but one example of our living the gospel of Christ. It is also a chance to invest in the futures of communities.”

OGHS Sharing Calendar—Investing in Futures

God has blessed us in so many ways. This calendar is designed to help us acknowledge our blessings but to also think about and pray for others. Each day highlights various situations and suggests a donation of coins or bills. Your household can decide what unit works best for you. It is easiest if you select one unit and use it throughout the days on the calendar. The sharing calendar works well with the OGHS coin box. To order additional coin boxes, call: 1-800-325-7061. Your gift will be an investment into the lives of those who need it most!
