

For the Love of Creation, Give Us Climate Justice!

Drawn by Mallory, age 16, from Middleburg Heights Community UCC in Cleveland, OH

Love for our children, love for our neighbors, and love for this beautiful world compels us to call for strong and immediate action in the face of climate and environmental damage. Our government must enact science-based protections that keep safe all that we hold dear. We need clean air, clean water and a world in which everyone thrives.

From love, comes action, and from action, comes hope!

President Biden and EPA Administrator Regan,

It is the moral responsibility of our nation to protect our ecosystems, advance environmental justice and public health, and address the climate crisis. Existing scientific and technical information indicates current pollution standards are inadequate to protect public health. That's why we are thrilled that the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) will be updating standards to protect our health and our climate. To care for our neighbors and prioritize the needs of those who are most vulnerable among us, we call on the EPA to set the strongest science-based pollution standards possible, as soon as possible.
